present

The background of the poster features three vibrant green chameleons perched on a thin, light-colored branch. One chameleon is at the top, another in the middle, and a third at the bottom, all facing left. The chameleons are highly detailed, showing their textured skin and large, prominent eyes. The branch they are on is slightly curved and has a few small leaves or buds. The overall background is a soft, warm, light brown color.

RIPPLES OF THE NEW EXPERIMENT

A 14-week training course to activate essential leadership skills to bring about fundamental change. A journey of personal and professional development, promoting social innovation. It is aimed at professionals - leaders, facilitators, managers, educators - and nonconformist learners who wish to respond to their vocation and use their talents to stimulate meaningful change in the world.

This training is aimed at the type of people who ask themselves: What work did I come to do in the world? How can I contribute to change in order to respond to the current societal problems? What attitudes and capacities do I have to incorporate, in my work, in order to offer new solutions, in a context of multiple crises?

This course combines training, practical and experiential components, applicable to the daily life of any organisation and system. We will develop core competencies to act in complex, uncertain, volatile and ambiguous contexts: To understand and respond to what every moment asks of us or our organization; Co-create trusted environments that invite the acceptance of vulnerability, autonomy and creativity; Implement collaboration and action tools, guided by a deep connection with ourselves, with others and with the world, promoting change and being the change we want to see in the world.
